As a consumer, I have found that Microsoft has so monopolized the market that there is virtually no choice but Microsoft products. When a consumer buys a new PC, Internet Explorer is already installed, MSN is usually the default home page, Outlook express is the email program, there are links to Hotmail, MSN messenger is usually set up to automatically start, Windows media player is already installed.

Furthermore, in the office application market, Microsoft has shown that now that they have a lock on that market, they feel they can afford to pump up prices, and make it difficult for the casual user to move applications from one machine to another, but the same measures will do nothing to stop counterfeit applications.

Microsoft is doing everything possible to stifle and stop ALL competition. This is a monopoly and it must be stopped.
